Engagements

Mazel tov to Zachary Bahm on his engagement to Alexa Ana Mazur!

A MESSAGE FROM RABBI AARON MEYER

In Pirkei Avot 5:17, a section of the Jewish text known as the Mishnah dating back to the 2nd Century CE, we read wisdom as relevant for today as for the day it was written:

"Every dispute that is for the sake of Heaven will, in the end, endure; but one not for the sake of Heaven will not endure. Which is the controversy that is for the sake of Heaven? Such was the controversy of Hillel and Shammai. And which is the controversy that is not for the sake of Heaven? Such was the controversy of Korah and all his congregation."

In a world marred by division and divisiveness, where our inclination to civility — let alone mutual responsibility — has fractured along lines of political party, generation, socioeconomic status, and identity awareness to name but a few, we are engaged in endless societal and personal disputes and arguments. Distinguishing between which disagreements bring us closer to shared society and which tear us further apart feels more important than ever. How might we be more like Hillel and Shammai than Korach? Let's take a closer look at both disputes.

Hillel and Shammai frequently disagreed over the correct interpretation of Jewish tradition. Should conversion to Jewish tradition be maximalist or minimalist in terms of study? Should we start with one candle in the Chanukah menorah and build to eight or start with eight and decrease to one? On what day should we celebrate the new year for the trees, now known as Tu B'shevat? In what position should your body be when reciting the Shema? More than 300 disagreements are recorded between the Schools of Hillel and Shammai — they never stopped arguing — yet we are told their disagreements were for the sake of Heaven, meaning they were worthwhile, earnest, life-sustaining disagreements. How could this be? Talmud teaches that their intentions were pure as was their style of dispute: the Divine Voice ruled in favor of Hillel's arguments because the students of Hillel were taught both Hillel's and Shammai's opinions. Imagine caring enough about the person with whom you disagree to evaluate, internalize, and be able to present their argument as on equal footing with your own!

Korach, on the other hand, rose in direct and open rebellion against Moses and his brother Aaron. "You have gone too far! All of the community is holy: who are you to tell us what to do?" the text of Numbers 16 tells us. Together with his followers, Korach sought power and self-aggrandizement through confrontation. It didn't go well for him — the text says the earth swallowed them whole —because his motivation was wrong regardless of the merits of his claim. How often do we fall into the same trap, argue for the sake of self-righteousness and being "right" long after it has become clear that we will not change the hearts and minds of our discussion partners?

Dr. Joshua Kulp, the head of the Conservative Yeshiva in Jerusalem, writes: "In Judaism, debate is legitimate. Indeed Jews are famed worldwide for being an argumentative people, and this is considered (at least by most Jews themselves) a positive attribute. What is problematic is not debate itself, but debate that does not attempt to reveal the truth, and especially God's truth. Debate that is only self-serving, an attempt to be victorious over the other side is considered to be illegitimate."

As we navigate the complexities of our modern world, may we strive to engage in debates not for the sake of personal victory, but for the pursuit of truth, understanding, and a shared vision for a better society, just as Hillel and Shammai did. It's significantly more difficult, as it puts the importance of relationship above ideology, but it's the only way for the sake of Heaven.

A MESSAGE FROM CANTOR KALIX JACOBSON

In the aftermath of a brutal year, the last thing likely on our minds is hope. It may feel distant, like a sentiment held in a past life. I know this because I have been there with you every step of the way in 5784. It feels as though the Jewish people have been dealt blow after blow this year. This upcoming High Holy Day season and the commemorations of October 7th and October 27th will likely feel raw and painful. The liturgy may challenge us. Anniversaries may bring tears. However, I want to posit an option of choosing hope. Hope in the wake of despair is a radical choice, and it is one that has propelled the Jewish people forward since the beginning of our tribe.

This is not the first and will not be the last time the Jews will need to be resilient in the face of adversity. How many times in our past have we persevered—through the destruction of the temples, the Crusades, the Spanish Inquisition, the Holocaust, and in more recent years, tragedies such as Tree of Life and October 7th. This is not to say that we should not acknowledge our sorrow—remembering, too, is of critical importance. And yet by choosing joy and hope, we acknowledge our roots and tradition. By reserving our emotions only to sorrow and despair, we are ruminating in what was. By allowing ourselves to feel joy and hope, we are looking forward to what lies ahead in life. And indeed, we are commanded to do so. Deuteronomy 30 verse 19 tells us that G-d has put before us life and death, blessing and curse. G-d tells us to choose life. What is life if not rooted within hope?

In this month of Elul and as we continue to the month of Tishrei and the days of Awe, I invite you to carry hope with you. This is a time of renewal, of return, of reflection. One of the famous components of this time is asking one another for forgiveness. Many also make promises to themselves to do better. This time is a reminder that we believe that change is possible—that we can heal what is broken within us and within the world. We are not beyond repair, and neither is the imperfect world in which we live.

By choosing to hope in this upcoming fall season, we are choosing to commit to Tikkun Olam, to rebuilding and repairing the world. We are choosing to commit to our community, Jewish and otherwise. We are choosing even the simplest of acts: starting each day and putting one foot in front of the other. In a world that can be vicious and cruel, each of these choices are acts of radical hope.

The poem that inspired the Israeli national anthem Hatikvah, Tikvateinu, was written in 1878, just one decade after Austria granted emancipation to its Jews, including Tikvateinu's author, Naftali Herz Imber. The poem begins: "Our hope is not yet lost." I believe that this remains true today. Our hope is not yet lost. My wish for the New Year is that you will join me in this radical choice of hope.

A MESSAGE FROM TEMPLE EMANUEL'S BOARD PRESIDENT, BETH SCHWARTZ

As I write this Bulletin message the days feel like summer while the nights and early morning hours carry the hints of crisp autumn air. This time of year has always felt transitional to me. The relaxed summer days and vacations are fading into memory and the hectic days of the school year are getting into gear. This is also a reflective time of year as we move into the High Holy Days - we reflect back on where we have been and then look forward to where we want to be.

Temple Emanuel is also in a time of transition – although we reached this time, not by turning a calendar page, but through disciplined reflection and future forward planning with our strategic partner Outside Angle. We reflected back on what Temple has been, we considered where we are now, and then we developed a strategic plan to bring us to where we want to be. Our plan was the result of hours of research and deliberative and thoughtful discussions with a variety of iterations that included steering committees, board, staff and congregants.

As exciting as transitions and new beginnings can be, they can also be intimidating, and anxiety provoking. The status quo, even when it isn't working well, is familiar; familiarity is comfortable. Change leads us into the unknown and unfamiliar both of which can be uncomfortable, and even feel scary. Thus when we hear "change", our instinct may be to say "NO, Let's just keep with what we've done." But if we pause, take a breath, and open our minds, our ears, and our eyes to new directions for Temple Emanuel we can likely help Temple thrive into the future. Society all around us is changing, and for Temple Emanuel to remain relevant to the society in which we are immersed we do need to make changes. Yes, change is coming to Temple, change not common in the synagogue world. But change that we firmly believe will keep Temple Emanuel a relevant, strong, and thriving congregation in the years to come.

A lot of you have opened the emails we have sent out about the strategic planning process, some of you have attended our Town Halls, others of you have had individual conversations with staff, board or steering committee members. I encourage everyone to continue to read what we send out (which is also available on the Envisioning Our Future section of our website), come to our Town Hall meetings, dialogue with us, and ask us questions, Then come to our Congregational Meeting on October 27th to vote on the proposed changes so that Temple Emanuel can thrive into the future.

As your own families reflect and transition into fall and the High Holy Day season, I wish you health, peace and happiness.

Any of our Steering Committee members are happy to talk with you about Temple's transition and strategic plan.

Holidays with Young Children: Making Memories, Making Meaning

Kate Louik, Director, Temple Emanuel Early Childhood Development Center

Do you remember what your house smelled like during the holidays? Can you almost taste your grandmother's matzo ball soup or your great aunt's pumpkin pie? These special times of year offer us unique opportunities to create and continue traditions with even our youngest family members.

While holidays are often a joyful time, they can also be stressful and hectic! Preparing yourself and your family to welcome the holiday is an important first step to celebrating. You might start by considering what is meaningful about the holiday to you. The list might include:

- Worship at synagogue
- Ritual or traditional foods
- Family gatherings
- A lesson or value connected to the holiday

By identifying what is most important to you about the holiday, you will be able to plan your celebrations accordingly. Checking the Temple worship schedule, coordinating logistics with family members, and finding books and activities for young children to engage with might be a part of your preparation for the holidays.

At Temple Emanuel ECDC, our holiday celebrations focus not just on telling stories and eating foods, but also on understanding the lessons and values we can learn from the holidays. During Yom Kippur, we learn how our relationships grow stronger when we're able to say we're sorry. On Sukkot, we learn about the value of Hachnasat Orchim (welcoming guests) as we consider whom we might invite into our Sukkah. Since Chanukah typically involves the giving of gifts, it can be a wonderful time to talk about the Jewish value of Hoda'ah (gratitude).

No matter how your family celebrates, I wish you a happy, healthy, and meaningful holiday season.

TORAH CENTER | UPDATE

From Steph McFerron - Torah Center Director

I spent a morning with Torah Center first graders in the SHIM Garden, thinking it would be just a quick photo op. But as I looked around, I was blown away by the magic of the moment. At first glance, it seemed like just another Sunday morning. But as I took a closer look, I saw our community's beauty shining through.

Our amazing teacher, who's also a congregant, was there, along with madrichim who sacrificed their Sunday morning sleep (thank you!), and an incredible parent volunteer who lent a hand. And then there was the garden itself, flourishing thanks to the love and care of our community. And let's not forget the kids, beaming with excitement as they got to put their classroom lesson on values into practice. It was a powerful reminder of what it means to live, learn, and lead Judaism together – and it was truly special.

As we kick off the new year, I'm eager to experience more moments like these. In a world that can sometimes feel divided, these reminders of community and connection are more precious than ever. Wishing everyone a new year filled with joy, meaning, and moments that bring us closer together!

STRATEGIC PLAN UPDATES

Overview of Temple Emanuel's Strategic Plan

The shared, immersive process to envision Temple Emanuel's future has been ongoing since 2022. During this exciting time, we've spent (and continue to spend) a great deal of time researching national trends and local demographics, discussing our community's needs and Temple's areas for growth, and analyzing the many opportunities — and challenges! — facing synagogues in general and Temple Emanuel specifically.

Hundreds of individuals and families find value in Temple Emanuel as their Jewish home in the South Hills of Pittsburgh. These wonderful people – representing the diversity of American Jewish life with respect to interfaith family status, race, gender identity, sexuality, ideological diversity, and more – are growing in their diversity of needs and interests and are inviting us to expand our definition of success as a synagogue to match. We believe that Temple has an opportunity to increase engagement in our programs and services by expanding access, both real and perceived, while maintaining the centrality of our Mission and Vision. At the same time, we must also address declining interest in traditional definitions of membership while balancing our budget to ensure our success for generations to come.

The twin pillars of Temple's Strategic Plan are 1) increasing Temple's vibrancy and 2) transforming our revenue model to maintain financial solvency. The path forward we see inspires a more flexible and inclusive organizational structure, requiring three fundamental shifts in how Membership, Governance, and Individual Giving function at Temple Emanuel:

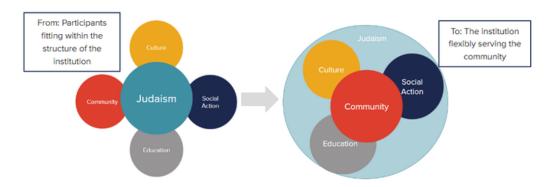

- Make it easier to feel a deep connection with Temple by changing traditional definitions of membership to make involvement in the community more accessible;
- Position Temple to operate more nimbly and responsively, centered on its mission by shifting its structure to one that is staff-led and continues to be guided by the community;
- Call on individuals to help us achieve continued financial solvency by contributing in accordance with the alignment between their individual values, the mission of Temple, and the actual costs to serve the community.

Centering Our Community

At the core of these shifts is a transition toward centering the evolving, diverse needs of the Temple community and away from the traditional approach of expecting those connected to Temple to fit within the structure of the institution.

The future of Temple Emanuel requires a shift toward centering the community and its diverse, evolving needs.

Noble aspirations, all, and we have some work to do to operationalize this plan. You're probably wondering: what does it all mean for me?

For those who have long called Temple home and for those who feel well served by Temple, the short answer is that your experience of programs and services probably won't change much. We heard you during our listening sessions and throughout this multi-year process and have endeavored to keep everything you love about Temple. Your "Dues" statement might now say "Annual Financial Commitment" and we will ask you to consider participating more actively in regular townhall conversations instead of an "Annual Meeting," but Temple remains the community you know and love.

For those who are exploring Temple, are new to the community, or aren't currently feeling well-served, we hope this will eliminate perceived barriers and invite you to experience Temple in new ways. Come to a service, check out a volunteer project or adult education opportunity, and speak with a member of our clergy or staff team. We will ask you for financial support that aligns with your values down the road; for right now we just want you to find your fit in the Jewish community and here at Temple. Whether you are looking for a more casual relationship with a synagogue, making sure there are people or families like you counted among our community, or you are ready to jump in with both feet: we're here for it.

We hope these changes will also help Temple solidify our place in the broader South Hills community and perhaps more directly welcome to Temple many who have not considered engaging with a synagogue before.

Next Steps

To facilitate these shifts and help us prepare for the future, Temple's Board has considered a number of changes from our status quo, including 1) a move to an individualized giving approach instead of a one-size-fits-few dues model; 2) changing the structure of Temple's governance model; and 3) thinking more inclusively about how Temple's leadership can reflect the congregation. To help our community better understand where we think Temple is headed, we have scheduled multiple town hall meetings and information sessions to answer questions and address concerns.

Date	Time	Торіс
Monday, September 30	7:00pm	Proposed Governance Changes VIRTUAL Town Hall
Saturday, October 12	2:00pm	Yom Kippur Afternoon Study Session
Thursday, October 17	6:30pm	Creating a More Inclusive Board Town Hall (Virtual and In-Person)
Sunday, October 20	11:00am	Temple's Proposed Governance Changes Town Hall
Sunday, October 27	12:00pm	Bylaws Vote

Azure Pittsburgh Family Concerts: Fall Series

Join us for "Festive Families," an event to get you in the holiday mood! Enjoy an evening of heartwarming holiday music, perfect for the whole family. Let's celebrate the season together with joyful tunes and festive cheer, featuring Chanukah and holiday favorites with a klezmer twist! RSVP here.

Azure Pittsburgh's mission is "to foster community for people with autism by presenting interactive concerts in a welcoming environment."

Azure Pittsburgh recognizes that autism and related challenges can present barriers to attendance and engagement in a formal concert setting. We program the highest quality artists while taking care to consider and remove as many barriers as possible to create a sensory-friendly environment where all people are accepted, embraced, and celebrated.

At an Azure concert, if you want to sing, dance, vocalize, or clap, you're welcome to do so, and if you need a break, there's always a designated quiet space for you. Azure concerts are a place for connecting with each other through music.
